Property Description

At Rancho Roble Sabana, the land has been left largely as it was found old trees still standing, native animals still moving through, wide stretches of green that haven't been flattened or filled in. Authentic Guanacaste Living is about waking up to dry forest breezes, hearing native wildlife in the distance, and feeling truly connected to the rhythms of nature. It's a setting where the landscape remains the main character and life feels grounded and real. Cenizaro, the opening chapter of this project, was deliberately kept to 27 homesites, a rare approach among many homes for sale in costa rica communities. No more. The idea was simple: fewer homes means more breathing room, more quiet, more of what drew people here in the first place. The planning didn't fight the land it followed it. Roads and infrastructure were laid out to work with the natural contours of the property, and that shows in how the whole thing feels when you walk through it.
