Property Description

Tucked into about 60 hectares of rolling Costa Rican countryside, Rancho Roble Sabana feels like the kind of place that was meant to stay just the way it is, a rare opportunity within today's Costa Rica real estate market. Authentic Guanacaste Living means embracing a way of life rooted in tradition, community, and connection to the land. Here, days unfold at a natural pace, shaped by warm sunsets, open landscapes, and the rich heritage that defines Costa Rica's North Pacific region. The first phase, Cenizaro, is keeping things intentionally small. Just 27 homesites. The roads, utilities, and layout were all drawn up with the land in mind, not against it. The result is a place that feels considered rather than constructed. Daily life at Rancho Roble Sabana is built around the idea that your surroundings should actually do something for you, a lifestyle that increasingly attracts buyers exploring the Tamarindo real estate market.
