Property Description

Located in Los Angeles de Rivas, this two-hectare property offers the most commanding mountain views in the region, with an unobstructed panorama of El Uran and Ventisqueros, Costa Rica's third and second highest peaks. The ridgelines of Chirripó National Park stretch across the horizon, giving the land a quiet, expansive presence. A natural spring provides the property's water, and in the summer season the mountain tops take on a soft alpine glow at sunrise and sunset. Several naturally flat areas are well suited for home sites, gardens, or a thoughtful permaculture project. Each terrace feels open yet sheltered, with excellent road access leading directly to the most promising building zones. The atmosphere is defined by quiet, where the main sounds are birdsong and wind moving through highland grasses. The result is a setting that feels both elevated and grounded, ideal for those seeking a landscape-centered retreat in the highlands of Los Angeles.
