Property Description

Located in Manuel Antonio, this $\frac{3}{4}$ acre in size lot is one of the last of its kind. Completely titled, this is the last buildable piece of land before the maritime zone and zoning regulations. The lot has views of the Manuel Antonio National Park as well as the rock islands. Located on Punta Quepos, this piece of property is home to numerous different species of wildlife including sloths, birds, and monkeys. The lot already has electricity, water, and the access is on a paved road. Distance from the ocean is approximately 300 yards away so you constantly hear the sounds of the crashing waves. The terrain is gently sloping, which will ultimately make the building process more of an ease. There is also another lot that can be purchased that is approximately the same size that would make an awesome site for a spectacular and stunning ocean view home.
